Hedda Gabler (Norwegian pronunciation: [ˈhɛdˀa ɡabl̥ɐ]) is a play written by Norwegian playwright Henrik Ibsen. Ibsen was present at the world premiere, which took place on 31 January at the Residenztheater in Munich. [1]Written by: Henrik Ibsen. Of all Ibsen's works, Hedda Gabler is the most detached, the most objective—a character-study pure and simple. It is impossible—or so it seems to me—to extract any sort of general idea from it. It is impossible—or so it seems to me—to extract any sort of general idea from it.

After reading Hedda Gabler, Strindberg recognized that he himself had served as source material for the character of Ejlert Lovborg, whom Hedda inspires to suicide. Of this, Strindberg wrote: “It seems to me that Ibsen realizes that I shall inherit the crown when he is finished. Eleven years later, in , came Hedda Gabler. Hedda tells the story of the original desperate housewife – and Eva Longoria Parker has got nothing on this lady. Hedda, once the best catch in town, is a woman restricted by Victorian values and trapped in a loveless marriage with a boring, boring man.

In private, Brack tells Hedda that it was actually an ugly death, that the pistol went off accidentally, and that scandal might ensue for Hedda. Hedda leaves the room and, after playing the piano for some moments, shoots herself. After a decade of praise for creating a modern style of drama, Ibsen found himself in a situation that would ultimately lead to the creation of arguably his greatest work, Hedda Gabler. Ibsen had become, at 61 years old, the source of infatuation for an assortment of young girls.
