Maritime mysteries -- old and new -- come to life in this episode series, combining scientific data and digital re-creations to reveal shipwrecks, treasures, and sunken cities on the bottom of lakes, seas and oceans around the world. They were the Atlantic, Pacific, Indian, and Arctic oceans; the Mediterranean and Caribbean seas; and the Gulf of Mexico. At present, however, oceanographers consider all other oceans and seas as belonging to the Atlantic, Pacific, or Indian oceans. The Atlantic Ocean is also similar to other oceans in that it shares borders with both continents and marginal seas. The definition of a marginal sea is an area of water that is a "partially enclosed sea adjacent to or widely open to the open ocean" (soyblancaalcala.com). The Atlantic Ocean shares borders with ten marginal seas.
